Referring to the accompanying map, it will be seen that the normal rainfall throughout the littoral and a great portion of the mediterranean regions to the north of latitude 40. is ample for agricultural purposes, but in the andine districts the rainfall is so slight that only by means of irrigation is the cultivation of the soil rendered possible. The distribution of the annual rainfall is as variable as its geographical distribution. North of latitude 38 the year may be divided into two seasons: rainy and dry. The first comprises the months of October to March, and the second from April to September. This designation of seasons refers as much to the amount as to the frequency. In the littoral districts, the difference in the amount of rain that usually falls in these seasons is less marked in the...
