General Musharraf has totally failed in mobilizing civilian support for the war against terrorism in Pakistan. Pakistani civilian support for the war is absolutely necessary. It may not come overnight, but I think the U. S. needs to identify civilian partners who will be able to provide that support. At the same time, it is also important for the United States to use the leverage it has built with the Pakistani military, not to just consistently praise the Pakistani military and in the process reinforce the prejudices of the Pakistani military that have led them to take part in four military coups in Pakistan's short history of 60 years. Instead, every interaction, whether at the civilian diplomatic level or at the military-to-military level, should be used to convince the Pakistani military that it is as much part of the problem as it is part of the solution. On the specifics...

Reviews

This is the finest publication we have read through right up until now. Better than never, though I am quite late in starting reading this one. It's been written in an remarkably easy way in fact it is only after I finished reading through this book by which basically altered me, affect the way I think.
