His portrait of Sir James Coats is a great achievement; so suave and distinguished, yet lacking nothing in virile handling. Near it is Mr. E. A. Waltons portrait of Lord Adam, one of the senators of the Scottish College of Justice, and one cannot but observe the remarkable similitude of style in Mr. Waltorfs work and that of the President. In another portrait, that of Prof. Crum Brown, Mr. Waltons tints are brighter and purer, and accord well with the smiling benevolence so characteristic of the subject. Mr. Lavery has made amends for last years lapse by sending a highly individualistic work in his full length of Mrs. Vulliamy. Other leading portraits are those of Bishop Chisholm, Aberdeen, and Mr. Hope Johnstone of Annandale, by Mr. ....
