Not illustrated. 1909 Excerpt: . . . other things, that: Dloxogen meets all the requirements of the U. S. P. , does not contain acetanilld, and retains its strength without undergoing the changes in odor, taste and sometimes color, which acetanilld produces in peroxides of hydrogen. It retains its strength and efficiency just as well In open as in closed bottles. It does not explode, spoil or become rank. It Is always the same--always uniform in quality. It is never shipped or sold, unless It complies In all particulars with Its own high standard. It is 26 stronger than the U. S. P. standard, 3ZM, stronger than most and 50 stronger than many makes of peroxide, contains less than one-half the free acid, and less than one-third the residue allowed by the U. S. P. This product Is made exclusively for personal, medicinal and toilet use, every operation connected with Its production having this end in view. Quality Article Always Gets Quality Price. It was plain to me, and it should be to every pharmacist, why the article referred to commands a top quality price, and why so many druggists are now pushing it. In business, Profit Is one thing: reputation another. Profit plus reputation Is everything. Our correspondent has given the Oakland Chemical Co. s product a fine send-off, but his communication is none the less interesting on that account. One question It raises should not be passed unnoticed and that Is the sale of Peroxide of Hydrogen, U. S. P. ,...
